Staff Director, House Government Operations Subcommittee, and advised him that, at the present time, the Agency is not interested in making any sort of contact with the [REDACTED] of Pasadena, California. I did request, however, that if it were available, we would appreciate a run-down of the present officers and stockholders of the corporation. This would be beneficial information should we be interested at some later date in dealing with this firm. Mr. Archibald thanked me very much for the quick response and indicated that he thought the information concerning the officers and stockholders could be provided.

Mr. Archibald advised that the final report on polygraph is in draft outline. In all probability, it will not go as far as the previous report but will, in effect, recommend those things already being done by the Defense Department and others, such as proper training of operators and review and approval of use of the instrument, be required by all users. He noted that some action probably will be required with regard to what he referred to as the "grandfather clause" in the DOD regulations. This portion of the regulations would allow a determination that present operators are qualified regardless of whether they have met the standards as otherwise set forth in the regulations.

In passing, Mr. Archibald noted that the bill pending before the Committee, which would curtail use of the polygraph, will probably come up for hearings after the Congress reconvenes. There are, however, no present indications that the bill will be reported out of Committee. He does not feel that a report on this bill will be necessary from the Agency. See also Memorandum for the Record dated 9 November 1965.
